Global Terrorism and New Media carefully examines the content of terrorist websites and extremist television programming to provide a comprehensive look at how terrorist groups use new media today. Based partly on a content analysis of discussion boards and forums, the authors share their findings on how terrorism 1.0 is migrating to 2.0 where the interactive nature of new media is used to build virtual organization and community. Although the creative use of social networking tools such as Facebook may advance the reach of terrorist groups, the impact of their use of new media remains uncertain. The book pays particular attention to terrorist media efforts directed at women and children, which are evidence of the long-term strategy that some terrorist organizations have adopted, and the relationship between terrorists ' media presence and actual terrorist activity. This volume also looks at the future of terrorism online and analyzes lessons learned from counterterrorism strategies. This book will be of much interest to students of terrorism studies, media and communication studies, security studies and political science.

A sobering, thought-provoking study of suicide terrorism analyzes the political logic and motivations behind the phenomenon, charting incidents of suicide terrorism around the world since World War II, examining key patterns in the events, assessing their impact on the political process, and outlining ways in which governments and society can fight them. This thesis is an analysis of the Global War on Terrorism. It focuses mainly on how the United States is failing in this war and offers solutions so that the U.S. can begin to succeed. I chose this topic because throughout my graduate career I have never received a definitive answer regarding our success in this war and whether or not we are winning or losing. My thesis focuses only on the al Qaeda terrorist group and its relation to this war. I think it is important to focus on al Qaeda because it is the culprit for starting this war. It is important to find out the reasons why the U.S. has yet to rid the world of al Qaeda terrorism. In my paper, I will show that the U.S. is failing in this war. The evidence for this proposition can be seen through a number of case studies and facts from various government and non-government sources. The first piece of evidence I show is that the beginning of this war lacked a definition of the enemy, which is vital to any war. I then show evidence of how al Qaeda has transformed into multiple entities making it far more difficult to target this group. By the end of my thesis, I will provide the reader with essential background knowledge of the Global War on Terrorism, reasons why the U.S. is failing in this war and viable solutions to succeed.

An gripping look inside international violence and terrorism.

The purpose of this thesis is to analyze suicide terrorism and to examine the logic behind it. The thesis will examine recent Islamic suicide terrorism and why it is so successful. This paper will also attempt to define suicide terrorism and explain how it functions. The first half of this thesis reviews a short history of suicide terrorism to show the logic behind it. It will begin with the Old Testament and continue throughout history until the September 11, 2001 attacks on the World Trade Center in New York City. This thesis will discuss the motivation for terrorist organizations to encourage, and individuals to commit, suicide attacks within their certain causes. It will also examine the mental thought process behind suicide terrorists. The second half of this thesis will examine the Islamic use of suicide terrorism to show that they follow the rational pattern of other suicide terrorists. It will discuss Islam and the violence of the religion. It will also examine martyrdom along with the goals and rewards of the jihadists. This thesis will look at the way the Western world, Christians, and Jews view Islamic suicide terrorists. Finally, the thesis will discuss the difference between historical and current suicide terrorism and how it will continue.

This new Handbook provides a comprehensive, state-of-the-art overview of current knowledge and debates on terrorism and counterterrorism, as well as providing a benchmark for future research. The attacks of 9/11 and the ' global war on terror ' and its various legacies have dominated international politics in the opening decades of the 21st century. In response to the dramatic rise of terrorism, within the public eye and the academic world, the need for an accessible and comprehensive overview of these controversial issues remains profound. The Routledge Handbook of Terrorism and Counterterrorism seeks to fulfil this need. The volume is divided into two key parts: Part I: Terrorism: This section provides an overview of terrorism, covering the history of terrorism, its causes and characteristics, major tactics and strategies, major trends and critical contemporary issues such as radicalisation and cyber-terrorism. It concludes with a series of detailed case studies, including the IRA, Hamas and Islamic State. Part II: Counterterrorism: This part draws on the main themes and critical issues surrounding counterterrorism. It covers the major strategies and policies, key events and trends and the impact and effectiveness of different approaches. This section also concludes with a series of case studies focused on major counterterrorism campaigns. This book will be of great interest to all students of terrorism and counterterrorism, political violence, counter-insurgency, criminology, war and conflict studies, security studies and IR more generally.

In this revised edition, the author analyzes the new adversaries, motivations, and tactics of global terrorism that have emerged in recent years, focusing specifically on how Al Qaeda has changed since 9/11; the reasons behind its resiliency, resonance, and longevity; and its successful use of the Internet and videotapes to build public support and gain new recruits. He broadens the discussion by evaluating the potential repercussions of the Iraqi insurgency, the use of suicide bombers, terrorist exploitation of new communications media, and the likelihood of a chemical, biological, radiological, or nuclear terrorist strike. Looking at the U.S., he reconsiders the Timothy McVeigh case and the threats posed by American Christian white supremacists and abortion opponents as well as those posed by militant environmentalists and animal rights activists. He argues that the attacks on the World Trade Center fundamentally transformed the West's view of the terrorist threat.

Terrorism is without a doubt a socio - political disorder that has unfortunately grown to the detriment of the international systems, global economy and security. Acts of Terrorism have increased over the years since the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks directed at the United States of America. Since then, some nations including Nigeria have been suspected as pro - terrorist countries, possibly a haven for terrorists and prone to terrorist attack. The aim of this thesis is to examine various factors that contribute to the development of terrorism in Nigeria. These factors include the following: Economic Disenfranchisement - Social Marginalization - Political Instability/Upheavals. However, before these questions can be answered, the concept of terrorism itself needs to be explained and defined. Perhaps one of the problems hindering the successful elimination of terrorism in the world is a lack of a generally accepted definition for the act itself. The definition varies according to the state, organization and institution one is dealing with. Albeit for the purpose of this paper, one of the various definitions of terrorism will suffice, otherwise the focus of the paper would be lost. However, for this thesis, terrorism will be defined as an act calculated to maximize the fallout from the destruction inflicted on an unsuspecting (non - combatant) audience perpetrated by a person or group of persons operating outside the realm of the recognized law with the aim of achieving some goals which in most cases is politically motivated but can also be socially or religiously motivated. There is a debate on whether poverty, inequality, and poor economic development are root causes of terrorism and terrorist acts in Nigeria. The general consensus is that there is no correlation or relationship between poverty, inequality and poor economic policies in the motivation and development of terrorism in any given area. However, for my hypothesis, I argue that poverty, malnutrition, inequality, unemployment, inflation and poor economic growth are predators of terrorism combined with social marginalization and political upheavals in Nigeria. Furthermore, this thesis will also argue that factors like population, ethnicity, religion, state repression and party politics are causes of terrorism that have existed in Nigeria for a long time before the events of 9/11.

Provides the final report of the 9/11 Commission detailing their findings on the September 11 terrorist attacks.

This is an intriguing volume on the political economy of terrorism. Emphasizing the role of ideological systems and the media in the definition of political violence, this book is theoretical, historical, and critical. Perdue suggests that there is presently a double standard of terrorism--one for the state and the other for its opponents--and reframes the terrorism debate. A historical review supports a revisionist position that places the issue in the context of global relations. Perdue proceeds through the investigation of historically grounded cases to systematically analyze state terrorism.
